

Apples To Apples - Rules Variations

*Bad Harvest****

Full Text Description

- A lot of times playing Apples To Apples, people tend to get caught with several apples in their hand that they don't particularly like. This variation is specifically for those of you who have ever been in that situation (and everyone else, too, of course). At the end of each round (when the original judge is judge again), everyone chooses three apples from their hand that they don't like and discard them; they then draw three new apples to replace them. This helps cycle through apples that you might not like as much more quickly, easily, and efficiently.

Summary Of The Rules Differences

- At the end of each round, after the person who judged first is judging again, all players pick three apples that they don't like and discard them, drawing three new apples to replace them.
